Footnotes:

1. Molluscs include many of the most important seafoods such as abalone, clams, mussels, octopus, oysters, squid, and scallops as well as terrestrial snails. Marine Molluscs and Crustacea (shrimps, prawns, crabs, crayfish and lobsters) are both known as shellfish.

2. Sulphur Dioxide is sometimes used as a preservative for dried apricots, dried figs, and other dried fruits, owing to its antimicrobial properties, and is called E220 when used in this way in Europe. As a preservative, it maintains the colourful appearance of the fruit and prevents rotting. It is also added to sulphured molasses.
3. Although Lupin Flour is present in very few products manufactured in the UK, it is present in many European bakery and pasta products, some of which are imported to the UK.
